

Peak oil text

Beep beep beep – oh no, it’s the alarm clock! Hannah would have loved to stay in bed just a little longer. But, as always, she has to get up and get ready for school. After a hot shower, she goes into the kitchen to make breakfast. She spreads some jam on a slice of bread and puts a fresh apple into her school bag.

Before leaving the house, Hannah quickly tosses a few clothes into the washing machine. She then brushes her teeth and rubs some cream on her face before setting off.

Hannah’s bicycle has a flat tyre, so she has to take the bus to school. She had planned to quickly finish her homework on the bus, but the road is so bumpy she can’t write properly. “It’s about time they fixed this road,” she thinks to herself, annoyed. Instead of doing her homework, she has a quick look at her Facebook page on her mobile phone. Cool, a message from her brother Nenad, who is currently in Greece. Hannah wants to fly over and visit him in the Christmas holidays. She’s really looking forward to it.

When Hannah arrives at school, she finds out that the first period has been cancelled because the teacher has the flu. Hannah and her friends use the time to play volleyball on the school sports field. After a 3:1 victory for her team, Hannah begins the second period feeling happy and looking forward to the rematch after school.